ClassWish Presents a Whole New Way To Help Teachers Bring Their Classrooms to Life

What if Picasso never had a paint brush?

What if Madame Curie never had a test tube?

What if Babe Ruth never had a baseball bat?

We all remember the first art project our mom put on the fridge, the fizz of our first chemistry experiment, or our first successful swing at bat...

Supplies are key to a student's learning experience. They help children to realize their potential.

We all want our students to get the most out of their education. As school budgets become tighter, students don't always get the materials they need.

ClassWish is an exciting new nonprofit website. The site empowers teachers, administrators and parent organizations to inspire their communities and get the supplies they need for their children to learn, grow and excel.

ClassWish makes it simple:

- Teachers, administrators, and parent organizations create a ClassWish List of the supplies they need for their students.
- They easily spread the word to parents and their broader school communities with ClassWish tools including emails and printable flyers.
- Contributors see exactly how they can help, and get a receipt for their tax-deductible contributions.
- Supplies are sent directly to the school.
- Children get a better education.
